Richwood

Richwood, Oct. 23. For the information of the citizens of the Richwood area, the following statement is made by one of the members of the newly organized county-wide electric co-op is made: The new co-op, with the help of Washington men and Mr. Hudgens, your county agent, is starting to function. At the committee meeting on Tuesday evening at the court house, Tuesday, Oct. 22, forms were passed out. It is necessary that these forms be signed by all citizens of the county who desire electricity. This is to be and will be done. If you want electricity your co-op money will be made available by Washington IF you cooperate. All citizens of this community are requested to call by G. P. Brannan's store and sign the new forms. The $5.00 previously paid will be transferred to the new co-op.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Dickerson, of the house "Thompson" and son, George, who owned Mrs. Lucy Knipe home from Lynchburg Sunday.

Mrs. Odell Fields, who has recently been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cordell, returned to her home Monday at Elk Park, N. C.

The story of the week is that pertaining to the wrecking of Mr. Carter Martin's wagon on Tuesday afternoon. Master Willie Richard Erne was helping Mr. Martin to back the wagon. Mr. Martin, who was driving the wagon, decided, early in the afternoon, that he should go home. His brother, Master, persuaded him to wait awhile, and they would take him home in the wagon. The weather being cool, Richard, along with Mr. Martin's dog, crawled into a sack of corn to await the filling of the wagon. When the wagon was filled and they called for Richard, a corn shock near by commenced to have the St. Vitus dance. The mules pulling the wagon, not being accustomed to seeing corn shocks stagger, through a field, bolted, and the wagon, on being questioned by the "driving ropes", inadvertently answered that the ignorant driver attempted to turn the mules too short.

Mrs. Harold Davenport and Mrs. Burnette Potter, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cordell, who have been visiting with their parents for some time returned to Elizabeth, Tenn. Wednesday. Mr. Fields, who is in the Navy at the present, stationed at Bainbridge, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Potter expect to buy a home in the community in the near future.

Mr. Brannan was in Lynchburg Tuesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sarver and children spent Sunday with Mrs. Sarver's sister, Mrs. Florence DeFord, in Madisonville.

Waterproof fabrics have been known for a number of years, and undoubtedly will increase in number and popularity, for civilian use. Shrink-proof wool, developed during the war and used especially for shrink-proofing servicemen's socks, has already appeared in limited quantities for civilian socks. Other wax and plastic treatments, offering a variety of effects, are gradually appearing. Wax finishes will make washable fabrics resistant to dirt and shed water. Plastic coatings can be used with almost any fabric, and may be woven, knitted, dyed, twisted or crocheted and made into draperies, upholstery, slipcovers, curtains, shower curtains, and bags, shoe fabrics and fashion accessories.

Food Enrichment Program Improves National Nutrition

The enrichment of flour, bread, cereals and other food products with vitamins and iron has been carried out extensively for a number of years as a sound, practical and inexpensive method for the achievement of better national nutrition. This practice has been promoted by the food and nutrition board of the National Research Council, particularly for products which are relatively inexpensive and consequently consumed extensively by low income groups whose diets are most in need of enrichment. In cases where it was believed necessary to relieve widespread dietary deficiencies enrichment has been made mandatory by both federal and state legislation.

The nutrients most commonly added to bread, flour and cereal products are vitamin B1 (thiamine), vitamin B2 (riboflavin), niacin (nicotinic acid) and iron. The vitamins are usually added in the synthetic crystalline form; the iron supplement may be in the form of reduced iron.

The usual enrichment practice consists of adding a relatively small proportion of a high-potency preparation of the vitamins and iron such as a flour premix, corn meal premix or bread enrichment water to the unenriched product and mixing thoroughly. The desired degree of enrichment is attained by control of the amount of high-potency premix added.

Another week has passed and here we are again with more school news. And exciting things have been happening!

For instance, last Friday night our football team played South Boston there. The score was 18-0 in their favor. Although fighting a losing battle, our team was plenty good.

Since the regular six weeks grading period is up we've noticed teachers walking around with stacks of six weeks' tests under their arms. We students are getting plenty tired of them!

And speaking of tests, could anyone tell us why Bolly Comer seems to prefer Carter's ink for all her answers?

For something that's really too good to miss, go into the school library and look over that wonderful exhibit of photographs. The exhibit consists of 32 pictures borrowed from the Va. Museum of Fine Arts. Each month there will be a different exhibit of art.

It seems evident that these little eighth grade girls have what it takes. Or are those admiring looks James Paulett gives Phyllis Harvey all in fun?

Rumors are flying that David Nash is going to take driving lessons to learn to drive. My mother and I wonder if these rumors are true.

May we insert a word of advice right now? It would be lot easier for all concerned if the high school girls would get dressed and out on the field promptly in activity period. Exercise is good fun, but not when everyone is late and has to hurry.

We're almost sure that everyone has heard of Durante and Moore, Romeo and Juliet, and Abbott and Costello, but we're quite sure everyone has heard of Garret and Tommy, Bea and Tye, and Jo and Billy.

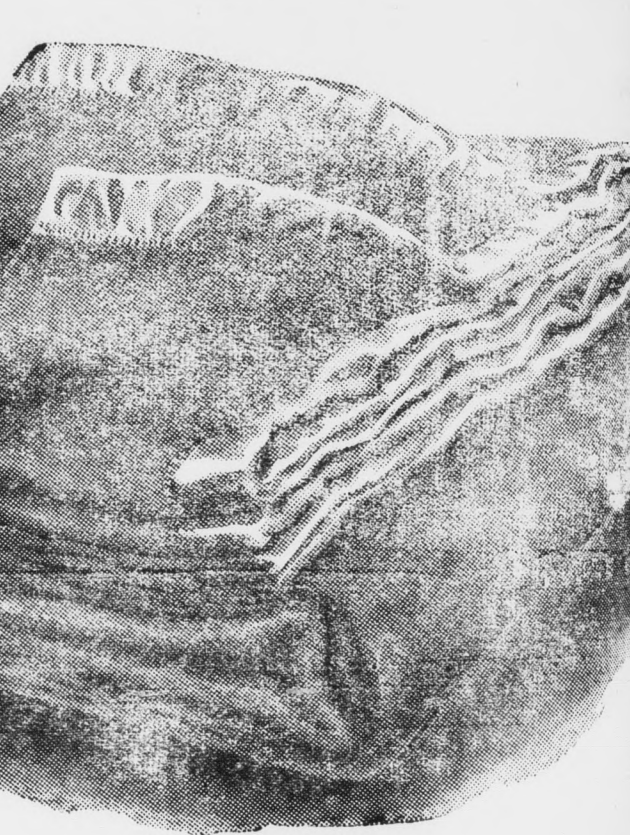

Well, it's about time to say so long till next week but before we sign off, won't some of you boys please, please tell us just what "Ay, ay, ay," is supposed to signify?

—By Mrs. J. C. Cheatham, Publicity Chairman.

WANTS INFORMATION ABOUT BROTHER

Chicago, Ill. Dear Editor: During the early part of 1944 my brother, a soldier, was stationed in Va. About a month and a half after D-Day he was sent over to France, August 2nd he was killed.

A few times he mentioned a couple that lived in Appomattox and told me how nice they were and he appreciated it. Now, he never once mentioned their name. I would like very much to get in touch with them. Could you publish a notice and have them write to me? Facts: Once they helped him catch a bus or else he might have been "swindled." Then they asked him to visit them after the war. I pray that you can help me. Maybe his name is familiar to them: Pvt. George Semmes.

(Note: The editor has the name and address of the writer of above letter.)

Rev. W. A. Clarke will go from Appomattox Circuit to Montvale Circuit, and will be replaced here by Rev. D. M. Spence.

Rev. J. W. Wesley Inge, Jr., was assigned to Concord Circuit, and Rev. T. L. Simpson to Pamplin Circuit.

Ask Sign-up For Electricity

Seventy-one leading farmers and their wives met with the Appomattox REA Cooperative Board Tuesday night last week. E. P. Sears, president of the board, asked that the REA Cooperative Board be organized. R. B. Hudgins, county agent, spoke regarding electrification in the county and then introduced Frank G. Coover, representative of the Washington office, who explained in detail just how farmers of this county can obtain electricity.

More than 40 committeemen are at present working their respective communities getting those without electricity signed with their county cooperative. It is important that everyone who has electricity immediately as this campaign will last only a few days. It is also important that if any home in the county fails to be contacted by a committeeman, please go by the county office and sign an application for electricity.
